Have a peaceful Thanksgiving holiday weekend!

Nobel Laureate Hermann Hesse wrote: "How he loved this river, how it enchanted him, how grateful he was to it! In his heart, he heard the newly awakened voice speak, and it said to him:

Love this river, stay by it, learn from it. It seemed to him that whoever understood this river and its secrets, would understand much more, many secrets, all secrets."

"That word in all its forms of Naponset — Aponset, or Neponset defies analysis." Many have surmised it means "river that flows through meadows." This would be a fair description since it travels through nearly seven miles of beautiful grassy meadows — the Fowl Meadows, in fact. So attractive to the early settlers were these grasses that the seeds were harvested and exported to Europe to produce the same luxurious grasses there.
