Reuse and the Benefit to Community A Beneficial Effects Economic Case Study for the Cherokee County Superfund Site

Introduction

For more than 100 years, widespread lead and zinc mining took place in Cherokee County, Kansas – part of a larger mining area known as the Tri-State Mining District. The mining created piles of mine waste and tailings covering more than 4,000 acres. These mine tailings contaminated soil and groundwater with lead, zinc and cadmium. EPA, the Kansas Department of Health and Environment, responsible parties, local governments, and property owners are working together to clean up the site, while preserving its continued use and supporting redevelopment. Today, following completion of cleanup across much of the site, the area supports a wide range of new and continued agricultural, recreational, ecological, commercial, public service and residential uses.

Superfund site restoration and reuse can revitalize local economies with jobs, businesses, tax revenues and local spending. Cleanup may also take place while active land uses remain on site. This case study explores the cleanup, continued use and reuse at the Cherokee County Superfund site, illustrating the beneficial effects of Superfund redevelopment.

Beneficial Effects

Site businesses and community organizations employ about 3,000 people, providing estimated annual employment income of over $134 million and generating nearly $584 million in annual sales revenue.

Site properties are currently valued at almost $500 million.

Site History

The site covers about 115 square miles in the southeastern corner of Cherokee County, including the cities of Galena and Baxter Springs. The site is mainly rural and agricultural. Cherokee County is home to about 21,000 people.

This area was once one of the largest lead- and zinc-producing regions in the world. It played an integral part in America's early industry and provided raw materials during the First and Second World Wars. After hard rock mining ended in 1970, millions of cubic yards of mining wastes were left behind. These piles of mining wastes, known locally as "chat" or "bullrock," contain heavy metals such as lead, zinc and cadmium. The mineral processing operation included smelting, which left lead and zinc slag and ash behind. Residential yards were contaminated from the ash. In addition, some houses were built on top of mining wastes. Some residents used mining wastes as fill material, for building driveways and for other uses, inadvertently spreading the contamination into residential areas. The waste piles also served as recreation areas and dumping grounds. In addition, the site is littered with the abandoned concrete foundations of former mills and smelters, open mine shafts, and flooded mine caverns and tunnels. Subsidence of the ground surface is not uncommon. The abandoned mines discharge metal-laden acidic water, known as acid mine drainage. EPA placed the site on the Superfund program's National Priorities List in 1983.

While the site's long-term cleanup plan was under development, EPA carried out two early actions to address high-risk areas. In the 1980s, EPA provided bottled water to residents while a permanent water supply system was being built. EPA also cleaned up residential yards that had high levels of lead.

Site Cleanup

Starting in 1987, EPA began selecting plans for the site's long-term cleanup. Long-term cleanups began in 1989. The site's cleanup focuses on consolidation and disposal of mine wastes to reduce human and ecological exposures. EPA's goals at the site are to protect human health and the environment and support opportunities for ecological restoration and economic development. After nearly 35 years of work at the site, over 12 million cubic yards of mining waste and over 2,700 acres of land have been cleaned up, with most of the land reclaimed for agricultural use. EPA places the waste material in repositories, which are then covered with a clay cap and vegetated soil. Coordinating with property owners allows EPA to tailor cleanup areas for compatibility with future land uses. For example, EPA can plant either pasture grasses or native grasses and plants on a cleaned-up area, for use as livestock forage or to create wildlife habitat.

To manage the cleanup, EPA divided the site into seven subsites: Galena, Baxter Springs, Treece, Badger, Lawton, Waco and Crestline. At the Galena subsite, EPA built a public water supply system in 1994 to provide a permanent source of clean drinking water to 1,500 people. A rural water district now operates the system. In 1995, EPA finished cleaning up mine waste on about 900 acres of non-residential land around Galena. The city of Galena had many residential yards that were contaminated with lead due to a smelter in the city. EPA tested more than 1,500 residential yards and cleaned up over 700 yards with high levels of lead or cadmium. The Galena yard cleanup was completed in 2001; about 180,000 cubic yards of residential soil were excavated, replaced with clean soil and revegetated. Land use controls are in place to guide future development in areas impacted by mining wastes. Restrictions are also in place to prevent people from using groundwater from the contaminated upper aquifer.

Following the residential cleanup, researchers found that children's blood lead levels in Galena have been cut almost in half. The former Eagle-Picher smelter's buildings and grounds have been decontaminated by the responsible parties; a local business is now reusing these buildings.

At the Baxter Springs subsite, EPA and responsible parties have cleaned up 1.5 million cubic yards of mining wastes so far. Responsible parties tested over 400 residential yards and cleaned up about 50 yards with high levels of lead or cadmium. Responsible parties also cleaned up about 160 acres of mining wastes, removed waste from streams, drained and capped tailings impoundments, and planted native grasses. Cleanup is ongoing at the Baxter Springs subsite.

At the Treece subsite, responsible parties tested about 150 residential yards and cleaned up about 40 yards with high levels of lead or cadmium. EPA and responsible parties also cleaned up over 500 acres and nearly three million cubic yards of mining wastes. In 2014, EPA and the Kansas Department of Health and Environment completed a voluntary buy-out of homes in Treece for interested residents. The Quapaw Nation purchased the land and now uses it for agriculture. In the future, the tribe may use the land for cultural gatherings such as a pow-wow. As the area's cleanup continues, tribal members will again be able to take part in culturally important activities such as fishing in the streams and gathering native plants.

EPA and responsible parties have also completed cleanup at the Badger, Lawton, Waco and Crestline subsites. About 1.9 million cubic yards of wastes on non-residential areas were excavated and disposed of.

As of 2019, over 800 residential yards have been remediated throughout the Site. Over 500 homes have been supplied with a clean, permanent source of drinking water. EPA has led much of the work from a local field office, working with the state of Kansas, the Quapaw Nation and other parties. EPA also monitors ongoing operation and maintenance efforts for the many remedies now in place across the site.

Beneficial Economic Effects

Today, the site is home to many continued uses and reuses, including agricultural, commercial, recreational, public services, residential, industrial and ecological areas. Cleanup has allowed many businesses to continue operating, preventing job losses and the loss of community income. Businesses that operate on site bolster the local economy and generate local and state tax revenues. Many recreational and public service uses in the response area were also able to remain open because of site cleanup. This section describes the beneficial effects of continued uses and reuses at the site. Please note that some of the uses described below are located on land where no cleanup was done or needed; these areas are included because EPA's investigation and cleanup at the site is expected to benefit the entire area either directly or indirectly.

By transforming thousands of mine-scarred acres with contaminated yards and drinking water into a pastoral landscape of clean yards and safe drinking water, the site's cleanup is directly and indirectly enhancing the economic vitality of the county and region. While it is outside the scope of this case study to quantify and monetize many of the cleanup's indirect economic benefits, it is vital to emphasize the important role of the cleanup in revitalizing the area's rural economy.

Agricultural Benefits

Thousands of acres of land at the site that were previously covered with mine wastes have been cleaned up and restored for agricultural use. During the cleanup, EPA's Superfund Redevelopment Initiative provided assistance to evaluate how ongoing cleanup decisions could take the site's future land uses into account. As part of this assistance, EPA developed a brochure for landowners that summarizes best practices and resources for improving soil productivity on former mining lands.

Treece Work Area #1

Before its cleanup in 2017, this 12-acre area in Treece was barren land consisting mostly of waste rock. As EPA worked on plans to clean up the area, the landowner asked whether the land could be reclaimed for agricultural production, consistent with surrounding land uses. EPA supported this outcome and designed the area's cleanup accordingly. At no additional cost, EPA was able to demolish and bury a significant number of old mine structures and cover the area with topsoil. This allowed the landowner to plant the area with wheat in the fall of 2017 and soybeans in the spring of 2018. After decades sitting idle, this area is now productive agricultural land.

Economic Benefits

Premier Surgical Institute

In 1995, EPA finished cleaning up 857 acres of the site in Galena. EPA removed over 2.1 million cubic yards of mine waste. After cleanup, a portion of the area was redeveloped as a medical complex. Premier Surgical Institute, which opened in 2013, provides inpatient and outpatient surgery, imaging and other wellness services. In 2018, Premier Surgical generated nearly $9 million in annual sales revenue and provided almost $7 million in estimated employee income.

CJ Foods

This Kansas-based manufacturer of premium natural pet foods operates a plant in Baxter Springs. In 2018, the facility generated about $133 million in sales revenue and provided over $8 million in estimated employee income.

Celltron, Inc.

Located in Galena, this business makes electrical cable assemblies, wire harnesses, electro-mechanical sub-assemblies and box-build assemblies for the aerospace, defense, commercial and semiconductor industries. In 2018, Celltron, Inc. had $113 million in sales revenue and provided nearly $16 million in estimated employee income.

Bagcraft

This business, located in Baxter Springs, makes packaging products for the foodservice industry. In 2018, Bagcraft generated nearly $119 million in sales revenue and provided almost $18 million in estimated employee income.

Monarch Pharmacy and Soda Fountain

This hometown pharmacy and old-timey soda fountain in Baxter Springs moved into its new, yet vintage-inspired building along historic Route 66 in 2017. In 2018, the business generated about $300,000 in sales revenue.

Atec Steel

This manufacturer of aboveground storage tanks is located in Baxter Springs. In 2018, Atec Steel had $56 million in sales revenue and provided nearly $7 million in employee income.

Mi Torito Mexican Restaurant

This family-owned restaurant and cantina is located on historic Route 66. It occupies a restored 1950s gas station. In 2018, the restaurant generated over $215,000 in sales revenue.

YRC Freight (Yellow Transportation)

This national trucking company has a facility in Baxter Springs. In 2018, Yellow Transportation’s local facility provided $17 million in estimated employee income.

Kingrey-Kellum Insurance and Real Estate

This business, located in downtown Baxter Springs, has been providing real estate and insurance services to the community since 1971. In 2018, the firm had nearly $1 million in sales revenue and provided over $350,000 in estimated employee income.

DeAnn Auman Hill Certified Public Accountant

This small firm provides accounting, tax and small business consulting services to the four-state area. In 2018, it generated over $140,000 in sales revenue.

Industrial Benefits

EPA supports the community's efforts to maximize economic opportunities in ways that are compatible with site cleanup. Some of the mining waste left behind still has economic value. Chat with coarse particle size is useful as aggregate for paving projects and also has the lowest level of contaminants. EPA has issued regulations governing the use of chat, see rules at Criteria for the Management of Granular Mine Tailings ('Chat'), 40 CFR Part 278. EPA has also provided specific guidance explaining how to safely reuse the mining wastes from this site.

Tourism Benefits

Visitors drawn to Cherokee County's hunting and fishing opportunities and its history are an important part of the local economy. Historic Route 66, one of the country's first federal highways, passes through the site on its way from Chicago to Los Angeles, drawing visitors from around the world. Many businesses at the site cater to Route 66 visitors.

While much of the site's cleanup took place in outlying rural areas, some cleanup was also needed within towns, especially in the city of Galena. These cleanups have supported the city's efforts to boost tourism.

Route 66 Visitors Center

This Tudor Revival-style filling station was built in 1930 by the Independent Oil and Gas Company. Phillips 66 Petroleum Company purchased it the same year and it served travelers until the 1970s. In 2003, this prime example of Route 66 service-station architecture was listed on the National Register of Historic Places. With a grant from the National Park Service, the Baxter Springs Heritage Society restored the building and opened it as the Route 66 Visitors Center in 2007.

Cars on the Route

Four women from Galena restored a former Kan-O-Tex service station as a tourism attraction along Route 66. It is now a gift shop and café featuring vintage vehicles, including the mining boom truck that inspired a character in the 2006 movie "Cars."

Decades of Wheels

In 2018, the largest car museum on Route 66 opened in downtown Baxter Springs. The museum features a rotating display of over 300 cars and motorcycles, from a Model T to vintage Corvettes and movie cars including Batmobiles and the "Back to the Future" DeLorean. The museum complex also includes an arcade, a café and a bed-and-breakfast.

Recreational Benefits

Two cleanup areas in Baxter Springs have been redeveloped as separate two-field baseball parks. Figure 16 shows these parks; both were built on land cleaned up by responsible parties.

Residential Benefits

Throughout the cleanup process, new residential developments have been built at the site, especially in Galena and Baxter Springs. In the Treece area, one of the site's remediated areas has been redeveloped for residential use. The homeowner grazes cattle on the adjacent capped repository, which has been newly revegetated.

In Baxter Springs, high levels of lead were found in a residential area where children play. EPA cleaned up the area in 2017 by removing 2,400 cubic yards of mine waste. The city of Baxter Springs completed the lot's revival by planting sunflowers, adding aesthetic beauty to the neighborhood.

Public Services (Continued Use)

A variety of public services have continued to operate at the site during the cleanup, including schools, post offices, libraries, police and fire stations, and public parks. These facilities employ over 300 people and provided over $10 million in estimated employee income in 2018. By enhancing the economic vitality of the area, the site's cleanup will indirectly support the continued strength of the area's community assets.

Green Space Benefits

Many of the acres cleaned up at the site have been put into reuse as various types of green space. Thousands of acres have been restored to agricultural use. Other parts of the site are now used as recreational parks. Other areas provide habitat for wildlife. The box below provides more information about the benefits of green space at cleanup sites.

Benefits of Green Space at Superfund Sites

Open green spaces at Superfund sites can be used to support a wide range of reuse activities, including recreational, ecological and agricultural uses. Careful planning can enable the integration of green spaces into site cleanup plans, resulting in the transformation of contaminated properties into valuable community assets. Green spaces are integral components of sustainable communities – they can help protect the environment and human health while providing other social and economic benefits. Parks, community gardens and other public green spaces create opportunities for people to gather, exercise and connect with nature. Researchers have found significant mental health benefits from living near parks.

The creation of green spaces at once-contaminated properties can re-introduce ecosystems and biodiversity into urban and suburban landscapes by providing corridors for migrating species and preserving habitat. They can also help mitigate stormwater runoff problems by slowly absorbing and naturally filtering stormwater, resulting in improved water quality due to decreased runoff and erosion.

Parks, natural areas and scenic landscapes also have great economic value – supporting regional economies through tourism, agriculture and other activities. Economic impacts of recreational activities can include outdoor recreation spending and reduced public costs related to healthcare and infrastructure. Protected green space can also increase the property values of nearby homes by providing amenities that draw people to live and work in the community. To learn more, see EPA's Green Infrastructure website at <https://www.epa.gov/green-infrastructure> and EPA's Smart Growth website at <https://www.epa.gov/smartgrowth>.

Property Values and Sales Tax Revenues

On-site properties help generate property tax revenues that support local government and public services. Today, properties at the site have a combined value of nearly $500 million.<sup>1</sup> On-site businesses also generate tax revenues through the collection of sales taxes, which support state and local governments.<sup>2</sup>

Conclusion

The Cherokee County site illustrates how Superfund cleanups in communities can protect public health and the environment while also enabling a wide range of new and continued site uses. Collaboration and cooperation among EPA, the Kansas Department of Health and Environment, responsible parties, local governments, and property owners are playing a key role in the ongoing restoration of this once-contaminated area. EPA and partners are continuing to clean up land impacted by mine wastes. So far, thousands of acres of land that were previously covered with mine wastes have been cleaned up and restored for agricultural use. Other parts of the site were cleaned up and redeveloped as recreational parks. The site's cleanup is also benefiting the area's tourism economy. Thanks to cleanup efforts, the site continues to support businesses and community organizations that provide vital jobs and services. Today, on-site businesses and community organizations support local economic growth, providing about 3,000 jobs and over $134 million in estimated annual employee income. In 2018, these businesses and organizations generated nearly $584 million in sales revenue.

<sup>1</sup> These properties contribute a large amount of property tax revenue to the localities. However, this case study was not able to collect property tax data due to the large number of parcels and taxing jurisdictions.

<sup>2</sup> The Kansas state sales tax rate is 6.5%. The total sales tax rate (including state and local) is 8% in Cherokee County, 10% in Baxter Springs and 9% in Galena. For more information, see <https://www.ksrevenue.org/bustaxtypesales.html>.

Reuse and the Benefit to Community A Beneficial Effects Economic Case Study for the Cherokee County Superfund Site

Technical Appendix

EPA gathered employment, wage and business income data for those businesses located within the seven sub-areas of the site that are most affected by the cleanup (see Figure 5 in the case study).

Employment Information for On-Site Jobs

EPA obtained the data included in this appendix directly from reputable sources and reported the data as presented by those sources. Information on the number of employees and sales volume for on-site businesses came from the Hoovers/Dun & Bradstreet database.<sup>1</sup> D&B maintains a database of 330 million businesses worldwide.

When Hoovers/D&B database research was unable to identify employment and sales volume for on-site businesses, EPA used the ReferenceUSA database.<sup>2</sup> In cases where ReferenceUSA did not include employment and sales volume for on-site businesses, EPA used the Manta database.<sup>3</sup> These databases include data reported by businesses. Accordingly, some reported values might be underestimates or overestimates. While sales values typically exceed estimated totals of annual income, sales can sometimes be lower than estimated income. This could be attributed to a number of business conditions and/or data reporting.

Wage and Income Information for On-Site Jobs

EPA obtained wage and income information from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS). Part of the U.S. Department of Labor, the BLS is the principal federal agency responsible for measuring labor market activity, working conditions and price changes in the economy. All BLS data meet high standards of accuracy, statistical quality and impartiality.

EPA used the BLS Quarterly Census of Employment and Wages database to obtain average weekly wage data for businesses at the Cherokee County Superfund site. Average weekly wage data were identified by matching the North American Industry Classification System (NAICS) codes for each type of business with weekly wage data for corresponding businesses in Cherokee County. If weekly wage data were not available at the county level, EPA sought wage data by state or national level, respectively. In cases where wage data were not available for the six-digit NAICS code, EPA used higher-level (less-detailed) NAICS codes to obtain the wage data.

To determine the annual wages (mean annual) earned from jobs generated by each of the selected businesses at the Cherokee County Superfund site, EPA multiplied the average weekly wage figure by the number of weeks in a year (52) and by the number of jobs (employees) for each business.

<sup>h</sup> Annual sales value calculated using the “Sales Per Employee” method. In cases where information sources do not provide annual sales data, an estimated annual sales value was calculated using the “Sales Per Employee Method”. This method involves dividing the company-wide sales value by the number of employees that work at all branches of the business. That value equals an estimated business sales value per employee for the entire company. That value is then multiplied by the number of employees at the on-site business location to calculate an estimated annual sales value for the site-specific business location.

Property Values

EPA obtained data on the most recently assessed values for property parcels at the Cherokee County Superfund site in August 2019 through property records accessible through Cherokee County’s online property appraisal database.<sup>4</sup> EPA collected property value data for the entire site area.
